BURDSALS PAINTS

"Fine feathers make fine birds."

Everyone is familiar with the old adage, and nowhere is the truth more clearly manifested than in the erection of a building. No matter how well a house may be built in respect to workmanship and material, if the paint is bad it detracts from the whole, and makes what would otherwise have been a first-class job bear the stamp of inferiority. Therefore, see to it that Burdsal's Steamboat Paints are used on and you will never be ashamed to show your house your friends.

SENATOR TELLER'S SPEECH

MADE BEFORE CONVENTION OF SILVER REPUBLICANS.

He Declared that No Issue Can Take First Place Over the 16 to 1 Issue.

KANSAS CITY, July 4.—At the opening session of the silver Republican convention to-day, Senator Teller, of Colorado, was chosen permanent chairman. He was introduced and spoke as follows:

When They Applauded.

After the playing of the "Star-Spangled Banner," by the Boston Military Band of Milwaukee, the secretary of the committee read the call for the convention and Stanley E. Parkhill, of Minnesota, read the Declaration of Independence. Several of the sentiments of the paper were applauded during the reading.

After the reading of the declaration the delegates all stood with the band rendered "America."

Temporary Chairman Teller then introduced Dr. Howard A. Taylor, of Chicago, a poet of the new political movement, who read his poem, entitled "The Liberty Bell."

Preceding the recitation of the poem the author, to the gratification of the convention, made a short speech, in which he compared some of the leading characters of 1776 to those of the last century, and concluded by saying:

His remark that George Washington was conspicuously distinguished from some of those of 1896 in that he could not do it, he met with a warm response from the convention. His reference to the military career of Rogers, of the Chicago club, and his allusion to wearing the plume which belonged to Ninth and Tenth (colored) regiments were sent to the front to delay the proceedings of the convention.

Senator Teller's Speech

Senator Teller was introduced, and spoke as follows:

Drive questions are presented to the people by the press for their consideration and determination in the coming campaign. Questions of foreign and domestic policy are being given the most prominent place. The last Spanish war, have especially attracted the attention of the people in the last two years, and will continue to do so. Questions new to us and involving the people for the first time, are not so readily disposed of, but grant these questions are, they must not and cannot be allowed to pass unheeded, and still unsettled question, "What shall be the financial system of the republic?" and "Should we have a hard money, whether we have the gold standard or the bimetallic standard or the fiat money standard?"

It has always been and always will be sought after and used as mediums of exchange, and with whatever the financial system, with the gold standard there must be a fiat money. Both systems are equally beautiful—both exchangeable value.

He said he no longer pretends to favor over international bimetalism. It is well that it should do so, for the pledge of 1892 was made to secure votes, and Frank Johnson was elected by the vote of a man as soon as the campaign was over. The republicans boast that they have reduced the war debt $40,000,000, but they still will not allow the government to increase the national bonded debt $2,000,000 before they attempted to reduce it."

His Views on Trusts.

Speaking of trusts, he said that labor is at their mercy. "When it becomes necessary to sustain the prices," he continued, "that they have fixed, they close the factories, reduce their output and stop their labor strikes. The government is not interested elsewhere, if they can, and if not able to do that, to starve. Prof. Teller said that the government control, declared by the highest court of the land to be constitutional, the Hawaiian government is not interested in the great trusts are beyond the power of the courts and can not be restrained. Their power expropriation is the power of the government.

Mr. Teller reviewed the war with Spain and the results of the war. He said that the Philippines, "that were supposed to be no way to protect the people of those islands, but to protect the commerce of the world and our own honor, except to exercise sovereign power over them. Those who used to be the government of their own belief, but public sentiment and the interests of the inhabitants of the Philippines demand that of us."

The Porto Rican legislation received the approval of the United States as a part of the United States," said the speaker, "the duty on goods going into Porto Rico is not a duty on goods, but an export duty which cannot be forbidden by the constitution." He said that the United States has a duty according to the Philippines the right of government in their domestic affairs.

Our Duty in Cuba.

Referring to Cuba, Mr. Teller said: "No mention is made of the fact that the government was engaged in a new war and back to Cuba for trial the appointment of the administration who have the stealing Cuban funds, and fled to the United States for protection from the wrath of the Cuban government. It does not justify any laudation of the appointees or of the method of their appointment for a moment. It is a stain on American history has not been written than that of the administration of the United States in Cuba under Republican fields."

Mr. Teller referred to the refusal of the United States to admit the United States to the Boers and closed as follows:

"With such a record it is strange that thousands of men who have been members of the Republican party find it impossible to withdraw their support and to continue in its support, and turn to some other organization to find a better expression of their views."

"In the nature of things it is not to be expected that a party can be found that will take up with such a record. It is with all subjects, with all people, with all nations, who can no longer support that party; but in the Democratic party, with its long record of misdeeds, together with its record of 1896, and to again relate, together with their disapproval of the present administration, and the desire to fully discharge our duty as Americans in citizens by the support of that party, we must measure the support of that party."

"The administration and election will come a condition of administration in all departments of the government. It is a condition for the masses; better opportunities for struggling labor and liberty to our people, and a better condition in the islands of the sea."

The birds that were now in, the wooded areas and thickets, and the open fields. Prof. A. W. Butler, in his most recent report on the birds of the Indiana, in the geological report for 1897, describes all birds that have been recorded in this State, and he has informed that of these, 123 now are summer residents of and feed within the State, and that 100 of these are estimated, for fifteen years preceding 1897, were depleted 100 percent in this State, and that the remainder they now are increasing again.

"Indiana" is well located to have and maintain a full share of the birds. It is located in the Ohio valley, with the Ohio river cutting through it from north to south, and the lakes on the north. It is well known that the region about the Gulf of Mexico, and the mouth of the Mississippi, is the rendezvous where birds congregate, and make their start

Design to Connect Lake Michigan and the Ohio River.

George U. Bingham's subject was "The Michigan Road." The first mention of a road to connect the waters of Lake Michigan with those of the Ohio that I have been able to find in the periodicals is in the following provision in the treaty concluded on October 18, 1786, by and between Lewis Cass, James B. Ray and John Tipton, commissioners on the one side of the United States, and the chiefs and warriors of the Pottawatomie tribe of Indians.

"As an evidence of the attachment which the Pottawatomie tribe feels toward American people, and particularly to the soil of the State of Illinois, they hereby renounce their liberty and benefit themselves by creating facilities for leading citizens of Indianapolis to Broad Ripple. It was never used for navigation purposes, but it furnished water power for a number of mills. The owners of the mills refused to pay the water rent, and the State had many perplexing lawsuits. In 1860 Governor Joseph A. Wright sold that part of the canal that had been owned by Governor Harrison for $3,000. It finally fell into the hands of the Indianapolis Water Works Company.

BEGINNINGS OF RAILROADS.

Early History of the Roads About Indianapolis.

The subject of William N. Jackson's paper was "The Early History of Railroads about Indianapolis." His role of certain land-owners objecting to the canal. The delay almost certainly resulted in a fatal strike which was fortunately quelled by Mayor Caven. At the same time the Stock Yards Company stands fifth in importance in this country, being expected in receipts of business to exceed only Chicago, Kansas City, Omaha and St. Louis. Increase in business is noticeable in each year's report."

THE CITY LIBRARY.

Supported for a Few Years by the Private Corporation.

"The Origin of the Indianapolis Public Library," was the subject of John H. Wilson's paper. Enthusiasm in favor of free public libraries, he said, came
